Lingering Rules Questions Viewed by Student Leaders

Social restrictions is not a dead issue, but questions linger over what will be done about it in the near future.

This was the conclusion reached by ASMSU Pres. Rick Jones and Montana Kaimin editor Wilbur Wood in a free-wheeling, open discussion with a handful of students in the Lodge yesterday afternoon. This was the first in a series of Student Union-sponsored talks by Jones, Wood and other student leaders on a variety of issues every Thursday at 4 p.m.

"How many polls must be taken, how many petitions must be circulated before those in authority realize that this is a serious and important issue?" Wood asked.

The question in the minds of many students—particularly women—is whether AWS will do anything with the Central Board resolution presented to them about a month ago, Wood said.

Jones pointed out that AWS might have appeared slow in dealing with the issue, but that the reason for this could be that AWS is electing new officers.

He said he hoped something could be done during his term as president, but he agreed with Wood that "every day that prospect seems less and less likely."

Real Problem

Both Jones and Wood thought that the real problem lies not with AWS and ASMSU, but with the seeming reluctance of the MSU administration to face the problem.

Jones commented that students would like to discuss some of the problems and see something done, rather than witness an avoidance of the issue. Such an "avoidance," he said, leads to a lack of common ground and communication between administration and student.

Staying on campus until age 22—and out of a room with cooking facilities until 25—is unrealistic, Jones added, in comparison with other rules in society having to do with people 21 years old.

"Every person should have the right to be able to choose whether he will or will not live off campus," Jones said.

In answer to several questions from the audience, Jones repeatedly emphasized that students "are not challenging individuals in the administration" but are merely trying to discuss the problem "rationally."

Arbitrary Power

Wood added that for the most part students did not wish to indulge in "ad hominem" attacks on the deans of students. However, he said it was difficult to divorce people from the rules they enforce, particularly when there is so much arbitrary power in the hands of the deans.

Jim Ericson asked if ASMSU's concentration on particular rules, rather than general "philosophies about social welfare of students" were the right way to go about changing the regulations. Jones replied that the only way anything could ever be changed would be to go at things gradually and point by point.

Another member of the audience, Ken Osher, commented that a big problem seemed to be that administrators and people all over the state considered student opinion, no matter how overwhelming, "as zero, and 'n' times zero is still zero."

Torch Job Suspected In Car Burning Case

By JIM CRANE
Special for the Kaimin

An arsonist is suspected of starting the fire which gutted the interior of a car owned by James Leedy, MSU assistant professor of art, at 8:30 last night.

City Fire Inspector M. E. Fite said the fire burned too quickly to be an ordinary fire. The car was parked in front of the Leedy home at 1650 Madeline.

A neighbor of the Leedys reported seeing a person hunched over the dashboard of the car shortly before the fire broke out.

Two small cans were found on the floor in the front of the car.

Fite said the fire definitely started from and was accelerated by flammable material in the cans.

Mr. Leedy said that the cans were not in the car when he drove it earlier in the day.

Inspector Fite said the way the cans were burned indicated that they had no lids.

The car was insured.

A neighbor who saw someone in the car before the fire broke out told Mr. and Mrs. Leedy she thought the person was one of the Leedy children.

But the two Leedy children, Keith, 10, and Steffi, 3, were in their rooms all evening, Mrs. Leedy said.

When the fire broke out, Mr. Leedy ran to the car and opened the door. He said the fire had only burned one or two minutes but already was leaping five or six feet above the roof of the car.

The Police Department reported it is searching for a man suspected of starting the fire, but at 11 last night the man had not been found.

AFTER THE INFERNO—James Leedy of the MSU art department stares at the ravaged interior of his black 1961 Cadillac, which was damaged extensively by a fire yesterday evening in front of his home at 1650 Madeline. Police were searching for an arsonist late last night. The entire interior of the automobile was gutted, but the motor and tires scarcely were touched by flames. (Kaimin Photo by James E. Oset.)

AND BACK AT THE MUSEUM—John Ross, Missoula, holds a "Hohoa," a ceremonial war shield which he brought back from New Guinea. The artifact is made by the Kerema people, who live in the Papuan Gulf, the same area in which Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's son, Michael disappeared. Included in the exhibit are spears, face masks, fetishes, instruments and medicine man implements. Ross and his wife spent two years in the area, sponsored by the Australian government. The museum, located on the third floor of the Fine Arts Building, is open Monday through Thursday from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sundays from 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. (Kaimin photo by Jim Oset).

Wood Wins Hearst Award For Panama Zone Editorial

Wilbur Wood, Kaimin editor from Roundup, won a $250.00 scholarship in editorial competition sponsored by the William Randolph Hearst Foundation.

Wood's editorial, "Panama: Long-Range Changes," tied for fourth and fifth place in the January competition with an editorial by Richard Gibson, junior from the University of Washington. The MSU School of Journalism will receive a grant equivalent to the one awarded to Wood.

Wood

Wood's January 22 editorial said that the Panamanian situation gave America, "The opportunity to work out some of the glaring differences between our big 'have' nation and the tiny 'have not' isthmus."

He suggested raising the canal rental paid to Panama and giving the Panamanian citizens readier transit across the Zone. He recommended wage structure changes which would benefit the Panamanians, and said that the United States should rejoice and permit the Panamanian flag to fly with Old Glory.

Wood thought that the program which trains Panamanians for canal management should be accelerated but said that complete control of the canal by the Organization of American States or the United Nations was "unpalatable" at the time.

The editorial asked that the United States take decisive action to resolve, "The ordeal which has been distasteful to American citizens and damaging to U.S. prestige."

The William Randolph Hearst Foundation sponsors seven monthly contests among the 46 accredited journalism schools. The contest categories include general news, editorial writing, spot news, investigative, and interpretive writing.

The editorials were judged upon knowledge of the subject, understandability, clarity, color, reporting depth, and construction.

Music Groups Join to Play Winter Concert

The University Concert Band, Chamber Band and Choral Union will join forces Sunday to present the annual winter band concert in the University Theater at 8:15 p.m.

Donald O. Johnston, assistant music professor, will conduct the 74-piece concert band in performing "Fanfare and March," by Romeo Cesarino, "The Universal Judgment," by Camillo DeNardis, "First Suite in E-flat for Band," by Gustav Holst and "Pageant," by Vincent Persichetti.

Selected from the concert band and the music faculty, the 37 members of the Chamber Band will be directed by William Manning, assistant music professor and acting head of the Band Department.

They will present George Kenny's march, "Coat of Arms," Beethoven's "Prometheus Overture," arranged by Clifford P. Barnes and excerpts from Gian Carlo Menotti's "Sebastian Ballet."

The closing Doxology, composed by Normand Lockwood, will be presented by the Chamber Band and the Choral Union.

Joseph A. Mussulman, assistant music professor, is choir director.

Nazi Party Chief Speaks at Rocky

BILLINGS (AP)—Students of Rocky Mountain College are sponsoring the appearance today of George Lincoln Rockwell, American Nazi Party leader.

Rockwell is scheduled to speak before students at 4 p.m.

Dick McCann, student body president, said faculty members know about the plan to bring KMSO-TV reported to the Kaimin late yesterday afternoon that United Press International had reported that George Lincoln Rockwell would appear at Montana State University today. University officials know nothing of the visit, however, and it is believed that the story was wrong.

Rockwell to the campus. A firm date for his appearance was not set until this week.

"He's coming here as a result of a general policy of student government to provide students with a view of extremes," McCann said.

McCann said the student group had already provided a campus forum for a John Birch Society member and a spokesman for racial integration. He said Rockwell's expenses are being paid by Associated Students of Rocky Mountain College.

Special Problems? Take the Course

By JAMES B. CONANT
In "The Education of American Teachers"
McGraw-Hill, 1963

It is striking that with the exception of honors programs, of provisions for independent work in some institutions, and of scattered instances of the use of examinations in place of course work, American colleges and universities of all types seem to be almost totally committed to the shibboleth of the "course" involving a certain amount of time in a certain room.

One might expect widespread use of examinations both to determine whether a student is prepared for a beginning college course and as a basis for bypassing required courses when he has by independent study already achieved mastery of the subject. . . .

It is high time to challenge the assumption that education takes place only when the student is physically present in a classroom. Opportunities for examining out should be offered much more widely than they are, especially in the area of general education.

A COMMENT FROM THE KAIMIN

We agree with Mr. Conant. Certainly independent study, especially when under close, personnel tutelage, most often can prove to be far more rewarding than an often dry round of lectures, the second-hand approach to the problem of educating us dullards.

The MSU catalog shows that in many majors there are "special problems" courses on the junior or senior levels. It is to these all too sparse opportunities for independent study that the lecture-crammed student should flee. Lectures can be fine, but not as a steady diet. Few faculty personnel would disagree, for they were once students themselves.

The Burden of the State University

By VERNON R. ALDEN
President, Ohio University

It is the public institutions that will carry the burden of educating the rapidly growing number of students. The means for both growth and maintaining quality are not available to many private colleges. After carefully evaluating their financial and physical resources, they rightly choose to maintain quality.

The public institutions on the other hand must provide both growth and quality. In the years ahead the state and municipal universities will be asked to prepare a larger proportion of our professional men, scientists, artists, government and business leaders.

If the public institution fails to provide excellence in education, the United States cannot maintain its present position of world leadership and will not remain free.

Polemics

John Birch and Logic

a column of disputation

By DICK STEPHENSON
Senior, English

The following is excerpted from a news story in the New York Times of Feb. 11:

"The current issue of the John Birch Society publication says that as long as there are Americans, Pres. Kennedy's 'memory will be cherished with distaste.'

"A 16-page article also suggests the President's murder was arranged by 'the Communist conspiracy' to prepare for 'a domestic take-over' that was frustrated when the Dallas police caught and identified Lee H. Oswald, the alleged assassin.

"The article appears under the signature of Revilo P. Oliver, professor of classics at the University of Illinois and a member of the Birch society's national commission.

"Pres. Kennedy, Prof. Oliver writes, 'procured his election by peddling boob-bait to the suckers.' He says the President supported the Central Intelligence Agency in 'a fake invasion of Cuba designed to strengthen our mortal enemies there,' and collaborated with Soviet Premier Khrushchev in a 'phony embargo' to provide a cover for transfer of Soviet troops and weapons to Cuba to use against the United States.

"Further, Prof. Oliver contends, Pres. Kennedy arranged to subvert and sabotage the nation's defenses. Pres. Kennedy, Prof. Oliver's article contends, did much for the Communist conspiracy, but was falling behind a scheduled date for the 'effective capture of the United States' in 1963, and 'was rapidly becoming a political liability.'

"Prof. Oliver says Oswald was trained in a 'school for international criminals' in the Soviet Union, and brought back here 'in open violation of American law, by our Communist-dominated State Department.'

Believe it or not it all happened in the United States.

We the John Q Q ("Q Q" stands for right wing) Birchers believe: (1) that John F. Kennedy was a Communist and (2) that the Communists arranged the assassination. (The same source.) Therefore, we (of the John Q Q Birchers) have composed some syllogisms to demonstrate the TRUTH of the above premises.

Let's substitute Julius Caesar's name for the late president's because everyone knows that he was a Communist just like Eisenhower, Dulles and Gpeth.

Julius Caesar was a Communist. The Communists arranged Caesar's assassination.

Therefore, Julius Caesar assassinated himself.

Corollary: Brutus was innocent so he must have been a Bircher.

Syllogism No. 2

There is much evil in the world. The Communists exist in the world.

Therefore, they cause all the evil.

Corollary: Everyone (except Birchers of the Q Q variety) are Communists.

Syllogism No. 3

If you like grape juice, You should join the Birchers, Because Robert Welch (H. W. Q Q Jr.) is a Bircher.

'Soggy Tips' Tell Kaimin to Dry Up

To the Kaimin:

Oh, cute headlines, we love you!

As members of the Soggy Belly-Up MSU swim team, we would like to acknowledge the thoughtful and sophisticated praise offered in Wednesday's Kaimin. Your headline ("Soggy Tips Roll Belly-Up in Three Swimming Meets") was terrific!

We hope the pool will not be crowded by people who now would like to join our seven-man squad so that they too may be fortunate enough to have the Kaimin demonstrate its wild support.

We cannot express enough gratitude for this enthusiastic coverage and the fact that with only seven representing the 4,500 students of this campus, the Kaimin has deemed us worthy of such rave notice.

Speaker Protests Kaimin Coverage

To the Kaimin:

It is obviously difficult to reduce a talk which lasted for one and one half hours to a few inches in a newspaper story.

But . . . while your report on the little speech I gave the other evening at Tuesday Topics, "Socialism and the Christian Tradition," may well have been an adequate survey for those who heard it, I am quite sure that it would mislead those who did not.

Would it not, in the interest of accuracy, be possible for your reporters to confer briefly with those whose talks they are reporting, prior to publication of the story? A few tinkering here and there in the story would have saved me considerable embarrassment and many explanations to friends who now charge me with either championing or challenging some of their most cherished prejudices when, in fact, I have done neither.

Two University Women Find Skydiving 'Great'

By DIANE STRATAS
Kaimin Reporter

In the heavens, 2500 feet above Miller Creek 'twas heard: "Now son, take care and follow me. Don't fly too close to the sun—and Icarus, watch out for those women divers."

On the ground at Miller Creek 'twas heard: "She's gonna hit that building I tell you. . . ."

But skydiver Mary Rippeto knew that she was not going to hit anything except the ground. Besides, she laughed, the only things she comes close to are fences.

The senior home economics major from Hollywood applauds skydiving as being fun. Sharing the same enthusiasm is Linda Wood, Great Falls, a senior health and physical education major.

Appeal to Women

Both predict skydiving will appeal to more and more women soon. Mary believes it will be one of the most popular sports before long.

"Skydiving is not as dangerous as everyone thinks," Linda contends.

Each prospective skydiver faces a rigorous training program. A thorough medical examination must be passed. For the next five or six weeks, the students are given intensive instruction by qualified instructors.

They practice jumping from a 30-foot smokejumpers' tower and falling in the proper position.

At the end of the period, four tests are given. The first is an oral examination in which the student must give spontaneous answers to situations involving malfunctions.

In a written test, the student is drilled on his theoretical knowledge. This is followed by the parachute-packing test.

The PLF, or Parachute Landing Fall test is last. This is a skill test in which the student demonstrates his ability to roll correctly upon hitting the ground.

The Silvertip Skydivers belong to the Parachute Club of America. Members must conform to the rules and regulations as set up by the PCA. Maj. Max E. Cannon, assistant professor of military science, is the faculty adviser to the Silvertips.

The $50 training fee includes insurance, as required by the PCA. Mary and Linda estimate the cost of a complete skydiving outfit at "about $150." Depending upon the size of the plane used and the altitude reached, the cost of each jump varies between $2.75 and $5.

For the first five jumps, the students use a static line which opens their parachutes automatically. On free-falls, the divers open their chutes with their own ripcords. Every diver wears a secondary reserve chute packed by a licensed rigger.

According to PCA regulations, the parachutes must open above 2500 feet if the jumper is a student. Experienced jumpers may delay until 2200 feet.

Linda has made one jump and hopes to make more after the skiing season is over. Mary has made six static line jumps and two free-falls since Nov. 16. Her highest has been from 3500 feet. She jumps as often as the weather, her studies and her other hobby, skiing, permit.

Neither woman confesses to a fear of heights, but both admit they feel a little tense before leaving the plane. Once out, they feel fine.

What do their parents think? Linda's "don't like it and don't understand it." Mary's parents thought she was kidding at first and when convinced, concluded that she was "nuts."

Women under 21 must have their parents' written permission before they are allowed to skydive.

Linda thinks jumping out of a plane at 2700 feet or so is "just great" and Mary concludes that "there is nothing like it."

"SEEMS TO BE A LOT MORE STUDENT ENTHUSIASM SINCE THEY CHANGED THIS EVENT FROM A 'GREASED PIG' TO A 'GREASED GIRL' CONTEST."

Road Series Begins Tonight for Grizzlies

The Grizzlies will start a three-game road series tonight against Oregon at Eugene.

The Tips will meet Oregon again tomorrow night and play Utah State at Logan Monday. All three games are non-conference.

The Montana victory drought has lasted six games. The Tips haven't won in five weeks.

It appears that the Grizzlies will stand a better chance against Oregon than against Utah State. The Ducks, 10-10, are similar to MSU in height and rebounding strength. The Oregon starters average 6-4 with the tallest man at 6-5. The probable Grizzly starting lineup averages 6-3.

Oregon has grabbed half the rebounds in its games. The Tips are pulling down 48 per cent of the missed shots in their games.

Both teams were out-rebounded by wide margins by Idaho. Oregon, who beat the Vandals at Moscow 61-58 and 58-54, was on the short end under the boards, 95-54, in the two games. Idaho nipped the Grizzlies 66-64 at Moscow Tuesday and gained a 60-35 advantage in rebounds.

MSU coach Ron Nord said that Oregon is basically a ball-control team but will sometimes employ a fast break. "The Ducks ran well with the ball against Gonzaga's full-court press two weeks ago and won 105-80," Nord said.

Nord said Oregon is one of the better defensive teams that the Tips will face this season. The Ducks have allowed opponents 65.8 points a game while scoring 67.9 themselves.

The Grizzlies, 6-10, have averaged 69.5 points a game but their opponents have averaged 75.0.

Probable Oregon starters are guards Jim Barnett, 6-3, and Elliott Gleason, 6-2; forwards Steve Jones, 6-5, and Larry Cooley, 6-4, and center Jim Johnson, 6-5.

Nord said that he probably will start the same five he did against Idaho: guards Tim Aldrich, 6-1, Jim Pramenko, 6-0, and Gary Meggellin, 6-1, and forwards John Quist, 6-7 and Bill Rice, 6-5. Harold Fullerton and Mike Persha, both 6-3 forwards, will see considerable action, he said.

Utah State, 18-3, probably is the best team Montana will play this season. The Aggies were ranked 20th in the nation by United Press International this week, and have received an at-large berth in the far-west regional of the NCAA tournament.

Anacondan Wayne Estes, who set the MSU Field House scoring record with 42 points here Jan. 18, is averaging more than 28 points a game and has been in the top 10 scorers of the nation for several weeks. The Aggies clobbered the Grizzlies 99-70 in the January game.

Estes scored 25, including two clinching free throws with 16 seconds left, as Utah State edged Denver 74-72 Monday. It was the second close call in a row for the Aggies who defeated Colorado State 85-84 Saturday.

Both games were on the road. USU has won 24 games to Montana's 12 since the series began in 1913.

The probable Aggie starters are guards Gary Watts, 6-1, and Myron Long, 5-11; forwards Estes, 6-6, and LeRoy Walker, 6-0, and center Troy Collier, 6-9.

Prognosticator Sees Three MSU Defeats

By TOM SULLIVAN
It seems as though my reverse psychology (picking the Grizzlies to lose and actually hoping they'll win) didn't work last week. Even

Sullivan

Aside from that it was a good week for the prognosticator. I picked 17 of 20 right for 85 per cent. The season total is now 117 correct of 154 for 76 per cent.

Gonzaga at Weber State is the only Big Sky game this weekend. The rest of the league will play a non-conference slate.

The Grizzlies will have their hands full at Oregon both tonight and tomorrow, but it may be pleasant compared to what's in store for them against Utah State at Logan Monday.

MSU Swimmers To Meet Northern Here Tomorrow

The Montana swimmers, 1-7 on the road, will compete against Northern Montana in the first home meet of the season tomorrow at 1 p.m. in the University Pool.

MSU's only victory this season has been over Eastern Washington, 53-36, at Ellensburg last weekend.

MSU coach Fred Stetson's seven-man squad is headed by free styler Ed Maguire, the school's "best-ever" in the 200- and 500-yard races. He set the 200-yard record at 2:00.8 in the first meet of the season. Maguire set the 500-yard mark last week with a 5:47.7.

He set both old records last year — 2:01.6 in the 200-yard and 5:53.8 in the 500-yard free styles.

The other Grizzly entrants in tomorrow's meet are Al Peterson, Pete Gardiner and Tony Hoyt, free styles; Jim Deeds, individual medley and backstroke, Pete Saevert, breast stroke, and Lee MacDonald, diving.

CUBS FROM WESTERN MONTANA — These four freshmen who all played for Western Montana high schools have played a big role in the Cubs' 8-2 record. Front row, from left, Doug Bachman, 6-1, and Jim Shea, 6-2. Back row, Glenn Smith, 6-3, and Doug McDonald, 6-2. Shea played for Butte Central High School and the others were members of Missoula County High School's undefeated team a year ago. The Cubs will meet North Idaho Junior College at Coeur d'Alene tomorrow.

Cubs Travel to Idaho To Try for Ninth Win

The Cubs will try to get back on the winning track tomorrow night against North Idaho Junior College at Coeur d'Alene.

The Montana freshmen, 8-2, lost to the Montana State Bobkittens 68-62 here Saturday after defeating the Kittens 69-64 the previous night.

The Cubs defeated NIJC 85-82 here Jan. 31 although the Cardinals had more field goals and out-rebounded Montana.

James Joe, 6-4 guard, is NIJC's leading scorer. He had 22 against the Cubs here.

Another big scoring threat is 6-3 forward Bill Smith who made 20 points and grabbed 10 rebounds here.

MSU coach Tom Flynn probably will choose his lineup from guards Jon King, 5-11, Doug Bachman, 6-1, and Glenn Smith, 6-3, and forwards Doug McDonald, 6-2, Tom Grisamore, 6-3, and George Hangas, 6-2.

King leads the Cubs with a 20.9 scoring average. Smith is second with 16.1 points a game.

McDonald has made 55 of 107 field goals for 51 per cent to lead the team. He is the rebounding leader with an 11.4 average. Grisamore has grabbed 10.6 rebounds per contest.

King has made 82 per cent of his free throws to lead the club. Smith has 75 per cent from the foul line. King is second in field-goal shooting with 46 per cent.

The Cubs are averaging 77.2 points a game to their opponents' 71.8. Their foes have scored more field goals, 286 to 282, but MSU has a 208-145 lead in free throws. The Cubs are averaging 51.9 rebounds a game to the opposition's 45.5.

Aldrich Is U's Best Shot

Guard Tim Aldrich moved into position this week as Montana's best shot.

The 6-1 senior took the field-goal shooting lead for the first time this season and strengthened his free throw lead against Idaho Tuesday.

Aldrich, for the second game in a row, made seven of 13 from the field, boosting his season total to 57 of 135 for 42.2 per cent. He is ahead of forward Bill Rice who has 47 of 113 for 41.6 per cent.

Aldrich didn't miss in seven free throw attempts against Idaho. His season total is 52 of 58 for 89.6 per cent. At this rate Aldrich will break the MSU season free throw record of 81.9 per cent set by Ed Argenbright in 1955-56. Guard Jim Pramenko continues to lead Grizzly scorers with a 13.2 average. He has made the most field goals (69) and free throws (60) on the team.

Aldrich is second with 11.9 points a game. Next in line are center John Quist (7.5 points a game), Rice (7.4) and forward Keith Law (7.3).

Rice leads the tips with a 6.6 rebounding average. Quist has pulled down 6.5 rebounds a game.

All This for One Kaimin...

By JANE TOTMAN
Kaimin Reporter

Journalism students squeeze more than 75 hours of work into every 24-hour day when one issue of the Kaimin goes to press.

What takes so much time?

The day begins when the reporters from the advanced reporting class pick up their assignments from the bulletin board in the Kaimin office.

Each reporter has a regular list of activities which he is assigned to cover for the term. The news editor plans the daily coverage and assigns the stories which will go into each issue.

While the reporters are probing the campus for news, the advertising sales class is selling ads downtown or they are fast-talking a client over the phone.

The ads for each issue must be turned into the news editing desk nearly a day and a half before they are scheduled to appear in print. The amount of advertising must be figured in the morning so the editing desk can determine how much news space there will be in the issue.

The advertising class spends approximately 10 hours a day soliciting and writing copy for ads.

The pictures for the Kaimin have to be taken by 3 p.m. and developed by 4 p.m. Cyrille Van Duser, news service photographer, then transfers the glossy photos to plastic plates from which the pictures will be printed by the press.

'Deathless Prose'

The "deathless prose," as Kaimin adviser Edward Dugan calls the news stories, must hit the copy basket on the editing desk by 5:30 p.m. the afternoon before publication. By this time, the reporters have collectively spent about 27 hours covering the campus news.

Evening stories are termed "late stories," and the reporter returns to the office after covering a lecture or Central Board meeting to write the story.

Students from the advanced news editing class work on the "rim" approximately 16 hours a night reading the news stories for mistakes and writing headlines. An associate editor, who sits in the "slot," oversees the copy editors and spaces the stories on the page.

After being edited the stories are sent down the copy chute to the print shop in the basement of the Journalism Building.

The shop prints all of the news stories in two-inch columns on long sheets of paper called galley proofs. The galley proofs are sent to the editing desk to be proofread for mistakes and measured.

A complete layout of each page of the issue is made by the associate editor who juggles the news stories to fill all of the space.

When the galley proofs are marked for correction, they go back to the printers who correct the errors and print an actual copy of the paper. This page-proof copy is read for mistakes about 11:30 p.m. by the associate editor; then, everyone heads for home.

At 7 a.m. the editors are back at the Journalism Building checking the Associated Press wire for changes in world news that occurred during the night. If a new wire story is needed, the old story comes off the page, and the new one is substituted. The page-proof is rechecked, and the new issues roll off the press.

As the Kaimin comes off the press, the editors check an early copy to give it the final "okay," before it leaves the Journalism Building. The editors can stop the presses if some serious mistake is discovered, but this does not happen very often.

By the time that the paper leaves for delivery at 11 p.m., the shop has put in 12 hours of work and the paid staff members have put in another 26 hours of time.

When you grab your Kaimin from the Lodge desk, the Kaimin staff has already begun work on the next issue.

The University of Washington has passed a no-hours regulation for women living in dormitories and sorority houses. The regulation applies to women 21 years old and seniors who have parental permission and gives all university women midnight hours Sunday through Thursday.

The University of Oregon is debating a controversial new-hours-for-women proposal.

The University of Washington's Board of Regents last week lifted its ban on Communist speakers, the result of strong protest by students.

The University of Texas' student store, a co-operative, pays dividends three times annually. The store is a corporation without capital stock and this year paid a 13 per cent dividend to students presenting cash register receipts.

Students from a number of U.S. universities are protesting proposed tuition increases, particularly increased out-of-state fees. Following are 1962-63 out-of-state fees at several universities, including MSU.

University of South Dakota $366
University of Missouri $450
Indiana University $540
Montana State University $617.50
University of Minnesota $660
University of Colorado $804

Segregationist Gov. George Wallace of Alabama continued his college campus tour with a speech at Denver University last week. Students paraded carrying placards, but all were orderly.

The Gonzaga Bulletin, Gonzaga University, is one of few university newspapers still carrying national cigarette advertising.

The University of Washington and Oregon State University are sponsoring a "Books for Birmingham Drive." The drive is an attempt to aid Miles College, Birmingham, Alabama, regain its accreditation by increasing the number of books in the campus library.

Brigham Young University now offers a course, Driver Education 10, for students who don't know how to drive. The fee is $10.

The University of Texas student association last week lost its copyrights to the U of T's school song, "The Eyes of Texas." The author of the song assigned the copyrights to the university, and for the last 28 years the U of T has been collecting royalties for use of its song. Attempts to renew copyrights failed, and the song is now public property.

WILMA

by CHAS. BULL

Last weekend's showing of Promises, Promises confirmed my suspicions that the Roxy is making very little attempt to give students and townspeople a Finer Film Series.

Promises, Promises was a purely commercial venture designed to lure unwary customers with blurbs advertising it as the "un-censored" and "un-cut" European version. There of course was absolutely nothing worthy of a censor's attention which hadn't already been shown (more definitively) in the June issue of Playboy magazine.

The fact that this Jayne Mansfield peep-show was not part of the regular foreign film series is irrelevant. The only audience the movie could possibly expect to attract would necessarily be drawn from the Roxy's regular customers—namely patrons of the University Film Festival. It seems to me that makes the presentation of this movie a direct insult to our taste in "finer" films.

The showings in the Roxy's regular Foreign Film Series have not been much better. Winter Light, Seven Capital Sins and this weekend's Conjugal Bed are films illustrating the fact that all foreign movies are not stimulating and that some are utterly tiresome.

If you need a standard for comparison check the excellent Student Union Foreign Film Series. Union Director, Jerry Van Sickle, and his student committee have shown that with intelligence and a little hard work some of the best foreign movies can be brought to town. I am sure they would be only too happy to advise the Roxy on future selections.

Don't forget Dostoyevsky's The Idiot at the Campus Theater through Sunday. It is the only respectable film in town this weekend.

Conjugal Bed (Italian)—through

Sunday at the Roxy. Directed by Marco Ferreri with Ugo Fagnazzi and Marina Vlady.

Forty-year-old bachelor marries virtuous young woman who has several widowed sisters. The newly-weds want children. They try, and try and try. Finally the young wife becomes pregnant. The husband leaves temporarily for rest and recuperation. His wife visits him. They make love—he dies. It is a comedy.

Charade—at the Fox Theater, through Tuesday. Directed by Stanley Donen (Pajama Game, Damn Yankees), with Cary Grant and Audrey Hepburn.

Audrey Hepburn's husband is killed in a rather stark opening scene. Apparently he was in illegal possession of $250,000 of government money. Criminal gang believes Hepburn knows where the money is hidden. Grant appears on the scene as Hepburn's protector not without raising suspicion as to his actual intentions. The whole thing winds up with a big chase in the Paris Metro. You guessed it. Cary Grant was a treasury man all the time. They are always well-dressed, you know.

U Debate Teams Compete in Meet

Four teams from MSU will participate in a three school tournament at the University of Idaho, Moscow, today and tomorrow.

U.S. Rejects Soviet Contention

GENEVA (AP) — The United States rejected a Soviet contention yesterday that the only way to slow down the arms race is by an immediate percentage cut in military spending.

The Soviet delegate, Semyon K. Tsarapkin, urged the 17-nation disarmament conference to adopt a Soviet proposal to reduce all military expenditures by 10 to 15 per cent.

The chief U.S. delegate, William C. Foster, resisted pressure from neutralists in favor of the Soviet proposal.

Foster said President Johnson's proposed nuclear freeze is the only way to stop the armaments race and ease international tensions.

U.S. spokesmen said the reduction of military spending by itself would do little to reduce tension.

Foster urged Tsarapkin to agree to Johnson's proposals to freeze production of intercontinental missiles and nuclear delivery vehicles.

"This would be the best way to go about reducing military budgets," Foster said.

Brazil's chief delegate, Josue de Castro, gave qualified support to the Soviet proposal. He told newsmen a treaty for reduced military spending "is the only issue which could open the way to disarmament." He was backed up by James Barrington of Burma.

Cochairman Foster and Tsarapkin could not agree on an agenda.

The American and Soviet delegation chiefs met Wednesday. Tsarapkin was reported to have demanded that the Soviet proposal for a percentage cut be the only matter put up for discussion on the agenda. Foster refused.

Gas and Alcohol Mixed by Board

HELENA (AP)—When is a grocery store not a grocery store?

The Montana Liquor Control Board is in the courts now because it has ruled a drug store selling some groceries is not a grocery store and thus is ineligible under board rules for an off-premises beer license.

Yesterday, the board ruled, in effect, that a grocery store which sells some gasoline is still a grocery store and not a gas station.

Under consideration was an application from Russell Sparrow of Ulm for a beer license for his combined grocery and station business.

Sparrow presented figures showing his groceries and meats comprised 77 per cent of his total sales, his gasoline and oils only 23 per cent.

The board decided his operation is primarily groceries and issued the license.
